Presentation: Capt. A. L. Bellott

Conference Diagnosis: Arteriosclerotic heart disease with hypertension. Dr. Chapman's opinion was that the evidence of ectasia of the aorta, auricular fibrillation, calcification of the aorta, and "dancing arteries" was indicative of this diagnosis. The origin of the patient's pulmonary infarct was thought to be from phlebothrombosis of the legs. Symptoms referable to the legs were thought to be due to endarteritis obliterans and cerebral symptoms were thought to be due to thrombosis of a cerebral vessel. The positive cardiopulmonary test was thought to be indicative of "laboratory lues." Dr. Chapman thought that there was a definite indication for the use of anticoagulants but no indication for attempting to avert patient's auricular fibrillation to a normal mechanism.

Presentation: Lt. Col. A. J. Carbonell

Conference Diagnosis: The differential diagnosis included intestinal allergy, regional enteritis and chronic bacillary dysentery. There was a very good clinical evidence indicative of intestinal allergy although the radiologist interpreted the small bowel X-ray as indicative of an inflammatory lesion. Additional information made available at the conference was the recovery of a Salmonella organism believed to be pathogenic for man from the stool culture. This raised the possibility of chronic bacillary infection of the bowel.
